COMPLIANCE

STAY "AUDIT READY"

Snapping a picture with your phone of every new food item that is delivered. You can also take label pictures during inventory every month. Either way, it's best to stay on top of all of your labels so you have one less thing to stress about come audit time.

BE 'IN THE KNOW'

If you don't know if your state has waived reviews or what the new schedule is going to be moving forward, ask! Or check your state's website. Most onsite reviews were moved to desk audits during remote learning with curbside service, but some may be revamping schedules moving forward. Always good to know when you are scheduled for your next visit.

GET TO KNOW YOUR REVIEWER

If you are new to a district, contact a neighboring district and ask them about their review experience. Better yet, call the reviewer, introduce yourself and ask her or him for some important areas to monitor. Most reviewers would be happy to help you ensure compliance and correct any past errors outside of the review process. They also can be a great resource about others in your region that may have helpful insights for special situations. With the ongoing changes in Child Nutrition, get the facts directly from the source.
